Impact Report

United Way Niagara acknowledges that Niagara is situated on lands and waters protected by the Dish With One Spoon Wampum covenant and by diverse treaties. This land is steeped in the rich history of the First Nations such as the Hatiwendaronk, the Haudenosaunee, and the Anishinaabe, including the Mississaugas of the Credit First Nation. There are many First Nations, Métis, and Inuit people from across Turtle Island that live and work in Niagara today. United Way Niagara stands with all Indigenous people, past and present, in promoting the wise stewardship of the lands on which we live, share, work and gather.

Opening doors, creating opportunities.

Creating meaningful change in Niagara starts with investing in solutions to local social challenges - and tackling these issues takes more than just a few of us. Once again, our hearts are full seeing just how much our community has come together to support one another and allow every individual and family right here in Niagara a chance to thrive.

Challenges of course do remain. Behind thousands of doors in Niagara, many people continue to struggle with issues we can't see. With the ongoing support of our donors and volunteers and the continued perseverance of our funded agency partners, United Way continues to strengthen the safety net of social services in Niagara that provide food, safe housing, income support, crucial social connections and more.

Thanks to you, our generous supporters, together we raised $5,289,000 in 2023.

Those dollars will be invested in the areas of greatest need, so our community can be the best it can be. It is our privilege to invest in life-changing programs that support people in all stages of their life. Helping people struggling behind closed doors starts with breaking down barriers for everyone in need.

United Way is proud to invest funds in 151 high-impact programs, which served 160,090 people in 2023. These numbers are sobering and remind us that there continues to be a strong need for support. We will continue to focus on emerging issues, with an emphasis on improving the social capital of those in need.

Last year, United Way continued on a path of finding innovative ways to respond to community need. New partnerships led to even more community access to fresh produce, a brand-new garden hub and a stronger social safety net. Your support allows us to push even further to respond to needs where they exist in our neighbourhoods, meeting local issues head on.

Niagara has always shown us that in times of great challenge and need, the community and heart of our region always prevails. On behalf of the United Way Board and team, we thank you for your unwavering support. Let's keep breaking down barriers, together.

Their exceptional support is evident in their continual employee contributions and corporate matching, the tireless efforts of their dedicated United Way Committee, and their enthusiastic involvement in numerous volunteer initiatives year after year (pictured below during a staff volunteer day at the Vineland Garden Hub). Algoma Central Corporation and their employees have contributed nearly 2 million dollars to the community through United Way over the last 20 years, proving that it really is true what they say; The Bear Cares.

"My husband and I both work full-time but since our mortgage renewal, our payment is now triple what it was. After all our bills were paid, there was next to nothing left to buy food. I was embarrassed to be in the position where I had to ask for help, but after visiting The Hope Centre the first time, I was treated with such compassion, I am just grateful. We received food and supports to help us move forward. Programs like these are so important, even for working people like us. Thank you!"

"Having consistent three-year funding ensures that the programs we provide for women and their families are sustainable and reliable for those who access them. It also provides the consistency for long-term impact, such as the support we receive for the transitional housing program, it gives women the time they need to do the work to move to a place of stability."

Elisabeth Zimmermann

Executive Director, YWCA Niagara Region

We Are All Human

"We are all human, and we all have stories," said Elisabeth Zimmermann, Executive Director of YWCA Niagara Region. Each person helped by the YWCA is unique, and there is no one-size-fits-all solution.

United Way's investments in YWCA's programming have a "profound impact on the day-to-day operations," said Zimmermann. YWCA receives funding for several programs that support women at all stages in their journey. "Women who come to us for support are often struggling with a number of things – it could be mental illness, homelessness, violence, human trafficking, addiction...the list goes on. The one thing they all have in common is they've all experienced trauma."

"When you consider the diverse challenges facing marginalized women just to access basic necessities, it becomes increasingly clear that living in poverty is a full-time job," she reflects. YWCA shelter advocates spent 1,575 hours in 2023 working with shelter guests on various case management tasks, the equivalent of working full-time for nearly a year, with the goal of securing safe and affordable housing.

Programs offered at YWCA build resilience, teach invaluable life skills, support women in recovery, secure housing in some cases or maintain housing in others. The agency provides comprehensive support services for marginalized women and their families, a vital resource greatly needed to meet the increased demand. "Given the current crises regarding opioids, mental health, homelessness and gender-based violence, we are seeing more clients with increasingly complex issues who need a lot of support to move forward," said Zimmermann. Success is not linear, and it looks different for everyone.

"There was a woman who had been chronically homeless for years. She had experienced unimaginable trauma in her life – but she amazed us all. She utilized many of our programs, including supportive housing, moved to independent housing and ended up going back to school," Zimmermann recalled. In other cases, something as simple as gaining the courage and confidence to say 'good morning' or even returning the next day is a big step.

YWCA's work is rooted in addressing inequities that affect women and their families in poverty. The wraparound support they provide every day is made possible by donors like you.

Expanding Food Access in Schools

What originated as a discussion about where families access food in a fourth and fifth-grade class has evolved into a scalable food security initiative supported by United Way's Community Pop-Up Market program. The creation of the Fresh West Market was a collaborative effort, led by students, teacher Alison Edward, Principal Robyn Scheubel, Nurse Austin White, and Niagara Region Public Health. The market provides consistent access to affordable, nutritious fruits and vegetables for families connected to the school. "Schools really are community access hubs," said Scheubel, "it makes sense to use them as food access points as well – especially in neighbourhoods without many food options." The Fresh West Market is run beginning to end by the students at Edith Cavell Public School, from the advertising and ordering to packaging and distribution. The primary focus was to improve household food security but it also integrates various areas of the curriculum, such as math, literacy, and health, while teaching essential skills like business management. Fresh West was so successful that Austin White, the school Public Health Nurse, brought it to Niagara Region. With their support, the school market model was born. The success of the program has led to its adoption in seven schools in Niagara to date and recognition at Queen's Park. United Way is proud to present this year's Community Builder Award to the dedicated Fresh West Market team for their efforts in enhancing household food security.

After School Matters

Engage. Enrich. Empower.

A child's early years and the experiences they have in their youth are pivotal to their development as adults. Basics like food and shelter are equally as important as the presence of good relationships, safety, security and belonging. We know that children who have access to these things are more likely to become successful, well-adjusted adults.

One hundred per cent donor-funded and delivered in partnership with The RAFT, After School Matters (ASM) is a program created to address these gaps in neighbourhoods, keeping children and youth engaged in learning and connected to their communities. ASM now operates ten programs in six neighbourhoods across Niagara.

Poverty is often an issue that affects families for generations. ASM empowers youth with resources to break that cycle. By providing a safe place to learn and grow, youth can connect with trusted adults and have fun, too. "The goal is to build that relationship with the kids, really get to know them. If someone starts down the wrong path, we can identify and redirect it early. ASM staff work tirelessly to provide that sense of community connection, build confidence, and equip every kid with the tools to navigate life's tough choices in a positive way," explained Mike Lethby, Executive Director of The RAFT.

If you ask the youth what they enjoy the most, it's unlikely they will mention their improved self-confidence or a noticeable improvement in behaviour at school. Similarly, we won't be the ones they excitedly call when they get accepted to that exclusive college program in a few years, or when they are the first in their family to earn a post-secondary degree. What you will hear is how much fun they had learning to skate or how much their mom enjoyed the dinner they made with a recipe they learned. They would tell you all these things with a smile because they are learning and developing as kids should - while having fun.

Since the first site opened in 2008, ASM has seen thousands of children and youth through the program. "Some kids started coming when they were five, and now they have graduated post-secondary and have come back to work with us," Lethby said. "Many others have finished their schooling, started careers and families of their own."

Everyone deserves to have their most basic needs met, and developing emotional attachments with trusted adults and a sense of belonging within your community is part of that. ASM builds up children and youth by developing relationships, promoting healthy engagement with the community and creating positive social connections with others outside their household. None of this is possible without the generous support of United Way donors.

Nourishing Young Minds

Niagara Nutrition Partners

Niagara Nutrition Partners (NNP) is a region-wide student nutrition program supported by United Way Niagara, that works directly in schools to provide daily snacks and meals to 24,000 students across the region every school day.

In order to maximize healthy child development, NNP delivers a universal program accessible to every student. This approach ensures that no student feels stigmatized for receiving food support, as it is inclusive of all students regardless of background, family income, gender, or race. “We are operating more than 200 programs at 171 schools right now, rural and urban,” said Jessica Stephenson, Program Manager of NNP. “We know that poverty knows no neighbourhood and hunger can affect any student. I like to say ‘what might be a necessity for some is often good for all’ and every student could likely benefit from the availability of healthy snacks and food at school. Making it universal avoids the program becoming stigmatized.”

NNP relies on the dedication of more than 1,000 volunteers to successfully operate and each program looks different to cater to the needs and values of the students it benefits. From offering culturally significant foods to newcomers all the way to engaging students in meal prep – NNP is nourishing young bodies and minds across Niagara.

As adults, we are not at our best when we’re hungry so how can we expect that of children? We send them to school to learn and participate, in academics and socially too. “There was this young man who was struggling with emotional regulation and causing disruptions in the classroom,” recalled Stephenson. “Knowing he needed a break from the classroom when this happened, his teacher turned it into a positive experience. They gave him the job of delivering food to classrooms and quickly saw an improvement in his ability to positively regulate his emotions but also provided valuable lessons about the importance of nutrition. They even dubbed him ‘head chef’. Engaging with the program has really made a difference for him, it’s heartwarming.”

Access to healthy food is central, but NNP is more than that. It empowers children to navigate social interactions, forge friendships and cultivate life skills far beyond the classroom. Thanks to your support, we can ensure essential programs like this can continue to make a difference in the lives of thousands of students and their families.

More Than a Food Bank

When we hear the words ‘food bank’, most of us think of a place where people can go to get food when they need it. It sounds simple enough, but it’s not. Poverty is “highly complex,” said Christine Clark-Lafleur, CEO of Port Cares. “There are so many contributing factors, requiring a wraparound approach to support. We are so much more than a food bank, we do offer meals but it is through our community navigator program that we can really make a long-term impact.”

The Community Navigator Program at Port Cares receives funding from United Way and is a “critical function of the agency.” The program works to offer ‘help, hope and opportunity for all’ by building trust and providing people with the tools and resources they need. Food insecurity is one symptom of poverty, and can’t be solved without addressing the underlying issues.

Port Cares currently serves more than 3,000 residents of Port Colborne, a significant percentage of the city’s population. The agency is a lifeline for children, families and seniors who courageously walk through its doors. “We work diligently to make this a warm and welcoming space, it’s hard enough to show up, let alone ask for help,” said Clark-Lafleur. “People initially come to us for food, but once they are here we can work with them to determine what their individual needs are and connect them with those wraparound supports.”

Making ends meet while living on a low-income brings other challenges. “When people are facing hunger there is often other crisis intervention supports they could use. Something as simple as help filing their taxes, connecting to medical care, negotiating with a landlord or even legal advice can be the first step towards getting someone back on track,” noted Clark-Lafleur.

On an average day the agency’s meal program serves as many as 198 meals to individuals and families. “Every person we meet has their own story to tell and reasons for being in the situation they’re in,” said Clark-Lafleur. It may be a mental health issue, job loss, addiction or family breakdown that pushes a person or family into poverty. It could also be generational, or all of the above. The reasons are endless. One thing is certain, it is always more than just hunger. “In order to really help people, we need to dig deeper,” she said. “We have to find out why they are struggling to afford food in the first place and then provide the right resources.”

Understanding that poverty involves more than just lacking material resources, Port Cares goes above and beyond basic food assistance. Acknowledging the interconnectedness of issues like housing and mental health, the agency adopts a comprehensive approach to address the root causes of poverty. Made possible by your support, Port Cares continues to empower individuals to break free from the cycle of poverty and build brighter futures.

Attachment is Key

Spotlight on:

Homelessness is complex and traumatic, especially for youth. Youth homelessness often leads to a lifetime of chronic and precarious housing situations. Once someone is homeless, survival becomes the top priority and often youth experiencing homelessness are forced to do things they would never have dreamed they would do. Youth are especially vulnerable to life on the streets and their path to it is never direct. 'So, what if we can prevent it from happening in the first place?' That was the nagging question for Mike Lethby, Executive Director of The RAFT from the beginning.

"Our shelter was always full. We were seeing about 500 youth every year, we were just going through the motions, providing shelter and always at capacity," Lethby said. "So we looked hard at who was showing up and why."

They realized that attachment, or lack thereof, was a major factor in youth homelessness. "These are not drop-outs and addicts who then become homeless. These are kids who became homeless, were forced to leave their communities and their school and experienced trauma as a result. It could be an argument with a caregiver that gets out of hand that sets a person on the path to leaving home. Our top priority is repairing that bond and reconnecting youth with family, through counselling or family mediation, then we focus on re-engaging with school. Once those are addressed, we can support that youth until their housing situation stabilizes – preventing that trauma and homelessness in the first place," said Lethby.

The RAFT works with close to 250 youth in their home communities across Niagara each year through its Youth Reconnect Program, diverting about 85% of them from ever entering the shelter. "The largest provider of affordable housing is home with family. It's all about relationships, social connections, and addressing issues before they hit their breaking point," noted Lethby. "So we are laser focused on repairing those connections first. We know that some family bonds are beyond repair, and leaving home may be the only option. The RAFT still provides critical in-shelter supports to youth who have nowhere else to turn."

The RAFT focuses on preventing youth homelessness by strengthening the bonds of attachment to home, school and community. When leaving home cannot be prevented, the average shelter stay is just 11 days, meaning that youth can secure safe, affordable housing very quickly. "We are able to get them into housing so quickly because we aren't looking for 30 apartments at a time anymore, maybe one or two," said Lethby.

Your generous support allows United Way to continue to invest in vital programs supporting vulnerable youth in Niagara. Together, we can prevent youth homelessness.

One Step at a Time

Spotlight on:

If your basic needs are not met, how can you deal with anything else? For most of us, a morning routine of getting out of bed and making coffee is so ingrained that we hardly have to think about it. However, for the people walking through the doors at Start Me Up Niagara (SMUN), these seemingly mundane tasks are luxuries you don't take for granted.

SMUN, a United Way-supported agency, is "the one place you can come where no one will judge you," said one client as he waited for fresh coffee to brew. "When you look like I do, you aren't welcome in many places," he said. Open five days a week, with lunches available on weekends, SMUN welcomes anyone without judgement. The agency offers a wide range of services and supports, working with individuals at their own pace.

"The people we serve are highly marginalized," said Laura Dumas, Executive Director of Start Me Up Niagara, "but they are still people." SMUN ensures that basic needs are met first – offering food, meals, a warm place to rest your feet, even semi-urgent medical attention – then they can focus on the rest. Acting as a comprehensive resource hub, SMUN facilitates access to essential services, fostering trust and relationships crucial for progress. When individuals are ready they will have access to income, housing and employment supports. "We have helped people avoid eviction and found stable housing for others. We have helped people find employment and become financially independent," said Dumas.

When people have consistent, reliable access to food, warmth and emotional support, they can begin to unpack an emotional history of trauma and adversity. One step at a time, SMUN is helping people build better futures.

"Before coming to Start Me Up, budgeting wasn't really something I thought about. But now it's something I do every month to ensure I can feed myself and pay rent. Honestly I'm afraid to wonder where I'd be if I never started coming here."

Philanthropist Circle

"Moving to Niagara-on-the-Lake from a bustling city was the opposite of an eye-opener. I had always supported United Way when working in Toronto's downtown because every day I came face-to-face with the reality of those less fortunate. But here, surrounded by abundance, living in this comfortable bubble, the problems just aren't as visible. So I think it's important to remember the difficult challenges that are hidden behind so many doors. I'm proud to do whatever I can to help United Way Niagara respond to the needs of our entire community."

Kurt F. Hagan

Copywriter, Songwriter, Dog Lover

United Way Niagara's Philanthropist Circle acknowledges individuals who have made cumulative gifts of $25,000 or more to United Way over the last five years.

"I give to United Way as a way of giving thanks for my blessings. We are on this earth to help one another, and donating to good causes is important to me. I started donating by payroll when I was teaching and by donating monthly in retirement, I can increase my donation rather than making a one-time gift."

Building Community Across Generations

Donors and volunteers, Karina Armstrong (L) and Dr. Rose Tannous (R), mother-daughter duo on family values and giving back to the community where they live and work.

Dr. Rose Tannous, a loyal United Way donor for more than 25 years, was first introduced to United Way casually by friends. Since then, she has seen the need continue to increase across the region and has steadily increased her involvement as a donor and volunteer. "I initially discovered United Way through my walking group," she recalled. "Attending events here and there. I began hearing the stories of those who were helped and saw the tangible impact."

For Rose, Niagara has been home for 37 years. Establishing herself as a successful cardiologist and raising two daughters, she reflects, "I've always recognized the privilege of having a supportive family and never had to experience the deprivation of basic needs. I firmly believe our upbringing profoundly shapes who we become. Niagara is where I've built my life and livelihood, so it's only natural to give back here. Collective giving creates significant change - a value I'm proud to impart to my children."

Following in her mother's footsteps, Karina now calls Niagara home after completing her university education and settling in to work at Niagara Health. Karina reflects on her giving journey, sharing that "accompanying my mom to United Way events over the years, I now find myself in a position of financial stability. Embracing the value of community support instilled by my mother, I've become an active contributor financially and through volunteering."

The wake-up call of the pandemic spurred Karina to reassess her priorities. "I realized that focusing on just myself wasn't making me happy," she explained. Karina took her support to the next level by joining the United Way GenNext Cabinet, a volunteer program that inspires young professionals to be the next generation of change-makers in our community. "Now, immersed in United Way's work, I recognize its pervasive impact throughout our community. My eyes have truly been opened to the organization's invaluable role in Niagara."

To break generational cycles of poverty in Niagara, our community must first inspire generational acts of giving and support. Rose and Karina are prime examples of how instilling a family culture of giving back can make a measurable impact on your own life and the lives of those in the community around you.

“My wife and I support United Way because we believe the organization truly understands the needs in our community. A lot of effort is expended to ensure money that is donated, is used to have a significant impact for those most in need, and we feel we see the positive results of those efforts. It gives us confidence in making an annual donation to United Way Niagara.”

Your Legacy. Their Future.

Supporting Niagara's most vulnerable.
 Today. Tomorrow. Forever.

Did you know? A Legacy Gift to The Forever Fund helps address immediate needs while also sustaining long-term projects, helping Niagara's most vulnerable children and families for generations to come. Including a gift in your Will allows you to make a substantial impact forever without costing you today.

Tracey & Joe Schenck
Co-Owners, King + Victoria Winery

"United Way Niagara has become our charity of choice over the last several years because we ultimately support what they do 'to support the most vulnerable people, when and where they need it, by investing in life-changing programs that strengthen the social safety net and build capacity in Niagara.' Through our personal donations every year, we hope to contribute to a consistent and sustained funding model that is of critical importance to the overall success of local organizations, programs, and services dedicated to providing the necessary support to the most vulnerable in our communities. We see support for United Way Niagara as a long-term investment in the health and well-being of Niagara, our community, and the place we proudly call home."

DONOR BILL OF RIGHTS

Philanthropy is based on voluntary action for the common good. It is a tradition of giving and sharing that is primary to the quality of life. To assure that philanthropy merits the respect and trust of the general public, and that donors and prospective donors can have full confidence in the not-for-profit organizations and causes they are asked to support, we declare that all donors have these rights:

- I To be informed of the organization's mission, of the way the organization intends to use donated resources, and of its capacity to use donations effectively for their intended purposes.
- II To be informed of the identity of those serving on the organization's governing board, and to expect the board to exercise prudent judgment in its stewardship responsibilities.
- III To have access to the organization's most recent financial statements.
- IV To be assured their gifts will be used for the purposes for which they were given.
- V To receive appropriate acknowledgement and recognition.
- VI To be assured that information about their donations is handled with respect and with confidentiality to the extent provided by law.
- VII To expect that all relationships with individuals representing organizations of interest to the donor will be professional in nature.
- VIII To be informed whether those seeking donations are volunteers, employees of the organization or hired solicitors.
- IX To have the opportunity for their names to be deleted from mailing lists that an organization may intend to share.
- X To feel free to ask questions when making a donation and to receive prompt, truthful and forthright answers.
